

Jessy Cajuste

June 21, 1950 - September 9, 2025

Jessy C. Cajuste was born in New York City on June 21, 1950. She was the only child of the late Roger R. Cajuste and the late Carmen C. Cajuste (Brice). Jessy's elementary and middle school education took place in the City. She attended boarding school at St. Clare's High School in Woonsocket, Rhode Island, and later returned to Cambria Heights, Queens to attend Hunter College.

After graduating, Jessy became an entrepreneur, designing and stitching together fashionable garments from her home. Jessy expanded on her creative endeavors to making jewelry items for family and friends. She would watch how-to videos and spend time shopping for the perfect bead to string into a necklace or bracelet. Along with her love of crafting, Jessy was very active in her community. She served on the board of directors of her residential development, participated in prayer services, and social events with her neighbors. Beyond her professional pursuits, Jessy loved instrumental jazz music, gardening, and having dogs.

Jessy was a devoted daughter. She worked from home while dutifully caring for both of her parents until their deaths. Jessy would later move with her mother to Tamarac, FL where she and her partner, Jack, spent time going out to various restaurants and socializing with friends. After years together, Jack sadly passed away.

Jessy experienced many health challenges in her life but always maintained her sense of humor and thirst for life. Jessy passed away on September 9, 2025. She is mourned by her godson, Claude Edward Augustin (Claudy) as well as many other young adults she guided and mentored. Jessy is also mourned by extended family members, close friends, and neighbors. She will be missed and lovingly remembered by all.
