“ He was known to me by one name, Coach. When we first met in 1977. I did not know that the quiet, unassuming gentleman would have such a profound impact on my life. He helped me to understand and analyze the game of basketball but his biggest contribution would be helping me to prepare for the game of Life. The skills he taught me through the game of basketball would help me take on any opponent in life. He help me appreciate that a minute in a game carefully thought out could be a defining moment in turning the tables on an opponent. His lessons of never giving up till the final whistle, that set plays were only to create options at each step of the way and were not solutions in and of themselves and that a team consisted of those on the court and those waiting to come on the court were invaluable. The fact that a quiet voice could speak above a tumultuous crowd and that my teammates were a part of my family are lessons I seek to live and share with those for whom I now guide and teach. He help me realize that each team member brought value to the team and that in unity there was strength.

Yes he was my coach in every way and I thank God for the opportunity of having him be a part of my life. We lost touch for awhile but I found him again. He lived for me to tell him just how much of an impact he had on me and how I looked up to him. He seemed taller then than now but then I guess that was because I grew physically, spiritually, emotionally and mentally. I am glad that some of us were able to show him our heartfelt gratitude on behalf of the entire team.

Coach I shall miss you and our talks but I will not forget the walk we had together. Rest in Peace and condolences to the family of one who stood tall and played hard.
